FOUR PAYMENTS FOR 4TH LIBERTY LOAN

Initial Payment Increased From Five to Ten Per Cent—Last Installment Due January 30th.

Ten per cent of the Fourth Liberty Loan subscriptions will be required on application instead of five per cent as for previous loans, according to information just received at Liberty Loan headquarters from the treasury department. Twenty per cent will be due November 21, twenty per cent January 1, and 30 per cent January 30. On a $100 subscription, $10 must be paid on application, $20 November 21, $20 December 19, $20 January 1 and $30 January 30.

This is the first time more than three installments have been arranged in addition to the payment on application for any Liberty Loan. The initial payment was increased as a means of discouraging the practice of some persons in the past of subscribing without carrying out the installments.

The setting of the last installment of 30 per cent as late as Jan. 30, was interpreted as assurance that the fifth liberty loan would not be floated before late in February or possibly in March.

The initial payment, although due at the time of pledging, need not be paid until Oct. 19, the end of the subscription period and loan campaign.

The installment rates will not interfere with the practice by which many subscribers have bought bonds through banks and other agencies and paid in per cent a month for approximately ten months. That arrangement, officials explained, is a transaction between the bank and its customers and the treasury is not involved.

The big drive to secure $1,000,000 Janesville's quota of the new loan, will begin in the city October 8th and continue for four days.

WAR ROMANCE STORY WILL BEGIN IN THE GAZETTE ON FRIDAY

"Bride of Battle" By Victor Rousseau is Title of First Story of America in The Great War.

The first story of America in the great war for humanity will begin in this Gazette Friday, and will run in installments. "Bride of Battle" is the title of the new serial story which was written by Victor Rousseau. It is a romance of the American army on the battlefields of France.

It begins with the assault of the American forces upon the Spanish defenders of Sanlúcar in the days of '39 and the scenes of the closing of the war are laid upon the steel-swept fields of France where the soldiers of the great republic of the western world are battling the foe of humanity.

Intrigue, mystery, chivalry, love, feats of bravery on the field of honor—all these elements are interwoven in a story that mystifies and grips and thrills.

On sale at St. Joseph's Convent, identification cards and pocket folders for soldiers and sailors. Also numerous religious articles.

HE'S LEADING U. S. FORCES IN FRANCE

Gen. John J. Pershing.

Honestly, we aren't kidding. The above picture is one of Gen. John J. Pershing, the man who is leading America's great army in France. The photo was taken quite a few years before Pershing thought of donning the U. S. uniform. The picture was taken when John was six years of age and probably even his fond mother hadn't thought then that her boy some day would lead the U. S. boys into the biggest battle in history. The picture is said to be the only one of its kind and was furnished by Pershing's brother, James.

CHICAGO MARKETS
Chicago, Ill., Sept. 25.—A break of $1@1.25 per cwt. in hogs in little more than a week is likely to check the bear raid for a time at least, although an $18 market for good hogs is a topical goal.

Packers smashed prices yesterday, as the food administration conferred at Washington with its advisory committee concerning ways and means of stabilizing the market during 1919.

As a stabilizer the 15¢ minimum having sold under $18 this year and it is doubtful if anything less than price-fixing would prevent such wide fluctuations as have happened daily of late.

The radical price-fixing element would have government valuations determine the value of every load of hogs reaching market, an impractical project. For such wild hog markets as have occurred recently no logical excuse can be given.

After the bear raid of last week better tone pervaded the trade circles but the $20 quotation was eliminated and $10.00 taking the best at the close, with most of the packing stuff under $18.50.

Lighter receipts are probable the rest of the week, but until outside demand revives, there will be little competition.

Awaits U. S. Decision.
The trade considers the market still high, but it is possible the bear raiders will desert until Washington announces its decision on the 13 to 1 proposition, which would give growers the value of 13 bushels of corn for every 100 pounds of hogs.

Announcement that the minimum weight of army beef carcasses would be 575 pounds, with trim, after Oct. 1 hit light cattle. It means that a steer must weigh 1,125 pounds alive and figure decently in the beef to get across the Atlantic. Some light beef will be taken for training camp purposes, but the bulk goes across the Atlantic.

Packers Get Windfall.
Packers had a windfall in the shape of thousands of thin western lambs that heretofore have gone to feeders at prices that looked $1 per cwt lower than recently, but choice lambs were steady, westerns making $18.25 and natives $17.75.

Omaha was glutted with western stuff, necessitating an embargo. The proportion of fat stuff in the run is about the smallest that trade ever has known at this season.

Heavy Cattle Movement.
Continuation of the heavy movement of cows and young cattle in the southwest is due to the fact that the northern buyers were not compelled to go to the breeding ground to get stock cattle this year, that loans are being called and feed is advancing.

W. S. Tasker returned yesterday from Montana, where he bought several herds of cattle at $80 per head, all below yearlings being thrown in. Liquidation of this nature is rapidly depleting the dry areas of the north-west of commercial cattle and will insure shortage next year.

About 15,000 cattle arrived of which half were western. Outside choice bulls it was a dull deal, the 900@1,000 lb. grades of grassers being hard to sell.

Choice to prime steers $18.50@19.00
Good to choice steers $17.00@18.50
Medium to good steers $15.75@17.50
Fair to medium steers $13.75@15.75
Common to fair steers $9.50@13.00
Heavy western grassers $14.00@17.00
Medium western grassers $10.00@13.00
Light western grassers $8.50@12.00
Good to choice cows $10.50@12.00
Fair to good cows $8.50@10.50
Canpans and cutters $7.00@7.50
Light and Bologna bulls $9.50@12.00
Fat butcher bulls $11.00@13.00
Good to choice stockers $19.00@19.90
Good to choice mediums $9.00@9.25
Light stockers $8.00@9.25
Good to choice cows $18.00@19.25

Hogs closed firm; part of a load sold at $20, but $19.40 was the practical top, $18.40@18.50 taking most of the packing stuff, with good hogs at $19.50@19.90, mixed stuff filling in the gap.

Choice to prime light $19.75@19.90
Good to choice pigs $17.50@18.00
Good to choice heavy $18.30@19.60
Good to choice heavy $18.30@19.60
Good to choice heavy $18.30@19.60
Common to fair heavy $18.00@18.35
Good to choice pigs $17.50@18.00
With 26,000 sheep there was more trash than the market could digest.

Choice lambs and sheep were steady, medium grades and feeders 2.35@2.50. The best native lambs sold lower. The best natives selling at $17.75, but $17.25, stopped nearly everything in natives.

Choice to prime lambs $17.25@18.25
Good to choice lambs $17.00@17.75
Fair to good lambs $16.00@17.50
Common to fair lambs $12.00@16.50
Yearlings $13.50@14.50
Wethers $11.00@12.50
Feeding lambs $16.00@16.75
Breeding ewes $12.00@18.50

Mrs. Brown weighs over 250. Not long ago she went into a store to purchase a waist. After telling the sales girl what she wanted she saw her walk over to a speaking tube. To Mrs. Brown's chagrin this is what she heard: "Say, Matzie, send down one Jumbo!"

"IF YOU DON'T WEAKEN."

"Somewhere over in France" our soldier boys are writing home that this is a great game—"if you don't weaken"—they are playing with the trenches, and it is a great game, this giving the opportunity to fight for humanity, not only for the present, but for the future generations to come. This may not be the war of nations that the Book of Revelations presages, but it is a war in which every man, woman and child in this country of ours can take part and play an important part at that.

Saturday there arrived in Chicago some of the first of our maimed and wounded and invalided soldier boys from the fighting front. Like their English comrades who reached London in the early stages of the war, minus legs, minus arms, with bandages over their eyes, fingers gone, hands blown off, maimed and wounded severely by the Hun's shells, their cry was "Are we down-hearted? No! Where do we go from here?"

Some of our own Rock county boys are coming back to us as physical wrecks and we will realize more clearly what this war means. Only Saturday a letter came from Sergeant Smith, thought a prisoner, (so reported by the federal government, in a Hun prison camp) that he was at a base hospital in France and expected to be invalided home because of his wounds. Even the news he was wounded so severely he must return to us as welcome, rather than the thought he was in a prison camp.

This is a great game if you do not weaken, but first and last we who stay at home must play our share and play it on the square. The next big drive is for the Liberty bonds, and Rock county must do its share. It has hundreds, possibly a thousand or more native sons, now in the service, and more going, and these Liberty bonds will mean their equipment and furnishing them with munitions to fight the foe.

During Saturday has been good to look upon this past season in crops of all varieties, and the call which has gone forth from the food dictator at Washington that we must save wheat on our daily rations, put our wheat on a diet as it were, so that we may feed the millions of men at Europe, and also aid in feeding our allies, so as to win the war, will not fall on deaf ears.

Meanwhile remember we are fighting battles here at home and that this is a great game "if you don't weaken."

INCOME TAX DODGERS.

In spite of the great amounts collected under the income tax, it is claimed by the commissioner of internal revenue that people who are dodging the law have cheated the government out of a billion dollars. That this seems possible is suggested by the small proportion of people who made returns.

There are 6,000,000 farmers in this country, but only 14,000 of them made income tax returns under the law of 1917. Of course the exemption was higher then, only $2,000 and $4,000. But with all the prosperity in the farming industry, it seems incredible that only that small number were liable to this tax.

One of 225,000 manufacturers, only 2,600 made returns. And so on one can go through all the occupations that are paying good money today, and find that the proportion who made statements was very small.

There are plenty of unprincipled people who feel that they are safe in ignoring the summons to come in and show up their income. They may keep no books of personal income, and they may think an internal revenue officer would never get any definite facts on which a court would convict an offender for failure to make returns.

The only way to get more complete returns will be to impose severe penalties on all who are caught dodging the law. When a man who is liable to this tax fails to walk up and say he is doing a low, mean, dishonorable thing. He ought to be made an example of. He is trying to sneak out of a debt which his more patriotic neighbors have to pay, and the limit of the law is none too much for him. When the slackers begin to realize that this law has teeth, then they will begin to walk up to the captain's office and settle.

THE AMERICAN DRIVE.

The superbly organized drive by the American forces at the St. Mihiel salient gives for the first time a chance to estimate American military ability on a large scale. We have previously had abundant demonstration of the force and spirit of the individual soldier, and of small units. Now we begin to see what will happen when all this individual force is organized in a great drive.

The German drives of March 21 and May 27 had to sweep over no such rough, hilly, and wooded ground as this, offering every chance for defense. The Hun drives won out by concentrating enormous forces over sectors of the line fifty or more miles wide, and the number of trained American soldiers is not yet great enough for that. No offensive over an equal length of line and working against equal difficulties ever made so rapid progress. Early in the war the French fought nobly to regain this coveted terrain, but the task was too much for them.

Animated, forceful action has swept away these Boche defenses that were able to stand any previous shocks in his war and has made a big bag of prisoners.

too, speedy fruition from this superb triumph. Before Pershing's men now lie the formidable fortress of Metz. For three hundred years this city, situated in the junction between the Moselle and Seltz rivers, and surrounded by hills, was regarded as one of the strongest fortresses in Europe. The Germans have greatly strengthened it since 1914. Surrounded by a circle of forts, it blocks the way to a vulnerable entrance to Germany. It would be very costly to take it by frontal attack. The pincer movement working north and south will reduce it in time, in spite of the difficult line of hills first to be traversed.

While children are to be allowed their Christmas toys this year, it is hardly necessary to give them those mechanical engines and automobiles that cost $6.35 and bust up before January 1.

The fact that the politicians are still pretty quiet indicates that their real work is being done. By the time the people get interested, then everything will be settled.

Before the first registration the men of the draft age were wishing they were older or younger. Now those above and below the age are wishing they could come in.

The politicians who are discussing whether to turn it to have the offices, should not consider it an objection that a candidate has given efficient public service.

For a people that for forty years have been talking blood and iron and the benefits of war, the Germans now cut a pretty poor figure when they suggest peace.

The Germans hit by Pershing's drive look like the bush leaguer who claimed the pitcher made a balk because the ball came so fast he couldn't see it.

Formerly football was objected to as too rough. Now it isn't rough enough to give a fellow preliminary practice against the Huns.

The people who have unfairly eluded military service may be safe now, but their jobs won't be safe when the boys get home.

The best argument to use to persuade the boys not to steal fruit is a dog that has had careful dental attention.

WAR PICTURES TELL MOST GRAPHIC STORY

French Art Exhibition At Home Of Mrs. Lovejoy Is Most Interesting

Strong, vigorous, and with a message which went straight to the heart were the pictures from the French war artists which were put on exhibition yesterday at the home of Mrs. Lovejoy. They were painted by the artists from the schools in Paris, who were called to the front during the war, and the exhibits are managed by their fellow artists of the "Les Beaux Arts", who are selling these little pictures in order to have a fund to help the relatives of the town, and give assistance in every way possible. The paintings themselves are made in watercolors, oils or are etchings, and are made by the men in intervals when they are on leave, or off duty for a few hours.

Many of them are tiny things the size of a post card, and they vary from that size to those from six to eight inches. They take in scenes in the landscapes in the trenches and along the line of march. Many of them depict the soldier in various lines of duty.

One of them in this collection shows the soldier on the firing stop watching out over the trench; another has a line of men charging through a field. Many of them take in scenes in the trenches, many of them being of the "front line" type, and are especially interesting in the pictures. The ladies of the local committee of the Art League, Mesdames Mordock, Howe, McGowan, Eichen and Hooper assisted Mrs. Lovejoy in caring for the guests. Mrs. Howe and Hooper presided at the refreshment table in the dining room, and Mrs. Eichen and Hooper were at the table. The color scheme at the table was red, a beautiful basket of scarlet dahlias being the centerpiece, and red candles helping to form decorations.

Baskets of Dahlias formed the decorations of the room, while French posters and flags also lent a note of color. Miss Mary Barker was in charge of a table devoted to give literature concerning the French war orphans, and she was prepared to give information on the subject. Many of the pictures were sold last evening, bringing from five dollars to thirty-five dollars in price, and probably nearly all of them will be sold today. Besides the sale of pictures, quite a substantial amount was made from the silver offerings given as donations. The exhibition was also open this afternoon and many people, especially the ladies, enjoyed the opportunity to see the pictures.

FURTHER RESTRICTIONS PLACED ON NEWSPAPERS

Further restrictions placed upon newspapers in the interest of conservation have been made by the War Industries Board to become effective October 1.

Orders which went into effect some little time ago and which publishers generally are observing even at this time calls for the discontinuance of mail subscriptions on the date of expiration. The War Industries Board has had this order in effect for something like a year and it is well pleased with the response which its large family of subscribers have given to the call for assistance in living up to the regulations of the government.

The additional regulations which have been issued under date of Sept. 20th, effective October 1, are as follows:

Must Cut Size of Paper.

The latest order follows:

The regulations governing Daily and Sunday newspapers dated August 5th placed no limitation upon the natural growth of circulation because it would be obviously unfair to cut down circulation to the six months period of January to June, 1918, in communities where there has been an unusual increase in population due to war activities. But to allow newspapers to continue to stimulate circulation would defeat the purpose of the regulations of August 5th, which were designed to reduce the total tonnage used by the newspaper industry 15 percent in daily editions and 20 percent in Sunday editions. It is therefore necessary to add the following regulations:

No publisher shall sell his paper at retail less than his published price.

No publisher shall use premiums, contests or similar means to stimulate his circulation.

No publisher shall issue holiday editions, or similar special numbers.

Permit Legitimate Growth.

The following have been ruled as legitimate methods of stimulating circulation:

First. Advertising the newspaper on bill boards.

Second. Advertising the newspaper.

Her Popular Daughter

By GEORGIANNA HORN

"My daughter," stated the large woman who caught her breath first in the pause in conversation and so got ahead of the other ladies, "my daughter is so terribly popular that sometimes, I declare, I wish I had a child who was so homely that people always spoke of her as having a lovely nature and sweet disposition. Not that Eloise lacks either of those attributes, but folks generally speak of her eyelashes or her color or something obvious like that!

"Just why I haven't been down sick with nervous prostration I don't know—sitting in my room right after night all tense and ready to jump at the slightest noise because three of Eloise's most devoted admirers insisted on all coming at the same time, and you never knew whether they were going to fly at one another's throats or not!"

"Harry would come in carrying a box of violets and would look with scorn at Grenfield's box of candy—and Percy would arrive just then with a new book of poems and turn pale at the vision of the maidens offering of the other two. You'd-a-thought they'd have liked a chance to go home and catch a bite of sleep, but each one would stick and hang, as if afraid to leave the others in possession of the field.

"Their conversation consisted of growls down deep in their throats and how Eloise ever stood it I can't see. She insisted it was an inspiring situation and seemed to thrive on it, wearing a different gown every night and having her hair modelled till it's a wonder the roots endured it."

"Eloise," I would say to her, "think of the horde of unattractive girls sitting at home darning stockings simply because they have not a single beau to dress up for—and release your clutches on three or four of yours! It's pure selfishness to corner the market, and I'm sure if Mr. Hoover finds out you are hoarding admirers as you are something dreadful will happen."

"I give you my word there were tears in that child's eyes. Mother," she said, "they wouldn't leave if I set off dynamite underneath their chairs! And I guess it's true. When a girl is really fascinating all her family can do is to stand it. Of course, if Eloise ate all the candy Grenfield brought, her face would be a sight, but her father and I enjoy it very much, and when Harry's flowers overran all the vases in the house I take a bunch to my sister, whose daughter would be amazed, and surprised into a nervous child if anyone so much as picked her a bouquet of dandelions! I always believe in cheering up those who suffer. I can't do much with Percy's books of poems, but they do to weight down things as well as make the library table look literary!

"I'm only thankful that Eloise got rid of a beau she had when she was sixteen. He was forty and a widower, with black whiskers. I always thought the whiskers were responsible for the child's temporary fascination, because she was young enough to be expecting birds and things to pop out of 'em any minute. This Mr. Sandmorrow was a collector of ores and rocks and every time he came he would bring Eloise a choice specimen weighing a pound, more or less, and you know how careless girls are!

"Her father was always stumbling onto one in his stocking feet and breaking a toe, and if I tried to take down anything from a closet shelf I was more than likely to get an awful crack over the head from a rock that Eloise had tucked up there in despair of finding any other empty place. All the mahogany was scratched up from Mr. Sandmorrow's ore specimens and there was a long row of them on the mantel, making the house look like a stone mason's sample office.

"But right after him Eloise had the young man who threatened to commit suicide and the lawyer who wanted to read her all his beliefs—and her father and I in the library were compelled to listen also—so, altogether, we kind of forgot our troubles with Mr. Sandmorrow."

"I've begged Eloise to freeze some of her admirers out, so that life may be more livable for father and myself, but she's so tenderhearted she couldn't hurt a fly."

"When I'm making so many of the poor things unhappy, mother," she says, "I just have to be nice to them!"

"As I say, I wish she had a pug nose or wore flat heels or something!"

"You poor thing!" sympathized, the thin woman who had been turning the heel of a sock and hadn't wanted to talk, anyhow. "I'm glad mine are both boys!"

Messenger Sheila.

For some time past the Germans have been making use of a special "messenger" shell both for liaison work within their lines and for throwing propaganda material into the allied trenches.

This missile is a tin tube, about ten inches long and one inch in diameter, with wings at its base. The top of the shell contains a box destined to inclose messages; below is a space filled with fireworks; at the base there is a shotgun cartridge, the explosion of which propels the whole and lights the fireworks in midair. This projectile is fired by a "gratzenwerfer," a device by a rifle, and can be thrown a distance of 600 yards.

JOHN WILLIAM DAVIS.
John W. Davis of West Virginia, now solicitor general of the United States, will succeed Walter Hines Page as ambassador to Great Britain. The new ambassador is but 45 years old and was born and educated in West Virginia.

He attended Washington and Lee University for his higher education and received the degree of doctor of laws. He was professor of law at his alma mater and later practiced law in his home town. He was a member of the West Virginia house of delegates in 1889 and the next year was a candidate for presidential elector-at-large.

Seven years ago he went to Washington as a member of congress and since then has been an active figure in the capital. He was selected to succeed himself in the house, but he resigned to become solicitor-general in 1913. In addition to his duties as solicitor-general he has found time to act as counselor for the American Red Cross.

At present Davis is in Switzerland, where he is head of the American delegation at the Berne conference between American and German missions on the treatment and exchange of war prisoners. His appointment as ambassador will not interfere with his work on the Berne conference. When the conference is completed he will return to the United States for consultation before proceeding to London to assume his duties there.

Beer Ancient Drink.
Beer is believed to be one of the most ancient of drinks. Manuscripts written at least 8,000 years before the Christian era show conclusively that even at that primitive period the manufacture of an intoxicating liquor from barley or other grain was extensively carried on in Europe.

Full, True and Particular.
A girl was asked to pursue "kiss," and this was her result: "This word is a noun, but it is usually used as a conjunction. It is never declined and is more common than proper. It is not very singular, in that it is usually used in the plural. It agrees with me."

A new-born baby's pulse should beat from 130 to 140 times per minute; a year-old child's 115 to 130; a four-year-old's 80 to 90; an adult's from 70 to 75, and an aged person's from 60 to 75.—Woman's World.

JANESVILLE GIRL WEDS DUNDEE MAN

Miss Eileen Murray United in Marriage to John Mair in Beloit at Nine O'clock This Morning.

Miss Eileen Murray, daughter of James Murray of this city, and John A. Mair of Dundee, Ill., were united in marriage at nine o'clock this morning at Beloit, Father J. T. Donahue of St. Peter's Catholic church of South Beloit performing the ceremony.

It was one of the prettiest weddings of the season. Exactly on the stroke of the hour the bridal procession, consisting of the bride, Miss Alice Murray, sister of the bride, and the groom, followed by the bride and best man, Henry E. MacKenzie of Rockford, walked slowly down the aisle to the strains of the wedding march. The bride was dressed in white organdie chifon, trimmed with Point de Venice and carried an arm bouquet of bride's roses. The bridesmaid wore a dress of pale green silk marquisette and wore a corsage bouquet of Ophelia roses. The ushers were Halley Hayes of Beloit, Wis., and Thomas Murray of this city.

Immediately after the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Hayes, 413 Shirland avenue, Beloit. The house was beautifully decorated with asters.

The newly married couple left on the 3:25 train for a week's trip. They will be at home at Dundee, Ill., after October 15th.

In An Historical American Drama in Eight Parts

"MY OWN UNITED STATES"

"My Own United States" pictures the most interesting pages of American history. It is not a war picture, but a romantic drama showing real historical characters in events vital to the history of the nation. Philip Nolan—"The Man Without a Country"—is the dominating character around which the story centers. This willful young man, who became as mere clay in the hands of Aaron Burr, is depicted in his youthful romances and moments of tragic struggle. His profound faith in Burr made him the most misunderstood man in the world, and his impetuous nature strengthened this impression. The picture shows the duel of Hamilton and Burr, the battle of the famous Frigate "Constitution" with the Algerian pirates, and others of equal import, each of which is acted with the utmost fidelity.

Heart and Home Problems

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have kept my heart with a man for over five years. He has not been going with me. I could imagine for me. He has a nice place, brings me a book for my birthday. I have known several other men, but I have never cared as much for them as I do this one. I care so much for him that I am only happy when we are together. He comes to see me three or four times a week, but he has never said one thing to make me think he cares more for me than a friend. He has told me in this last draft and I am afraid he will be called, because he has no parents and no one dependent on him.

What can I do to make him tell me if he loves me? If he doesn't say something to me, he goes away. I am contented in the man's friendship. Do nothing to force him to reveal his feelings, because he will speak voluntarily if he loves you. To give him a letter that you are eager might make him slower in making up his mind.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I was once deeply in love with a boy whom I thought was a nice boy at the time, but found out later that he wanted to go with another girl he had been seeing. I would not kiss him because I knew it wasn't right unless we were engaged. He has asked me to kiss him and said he loved me, and because I wouldn't say I loved him he went back to her.

Now I realize how much I really do love him. Can you tell me how to win him back?

Do you think she did kiss him at his request as he said? The fact he has been going with her since then, and she seldom hears from him. I have heard that he said he would go with another girl while she is gone if he knew she would not get angry. Do you suppose that is why he didn't go with me longer?

THANK YOU.

Speak to him in a friendly way, but do not let him think you regret his going with the other girl instead of you. It is human nature to want the things we are not sure we can have. When he tires of the girl he is going with now he may want to go back to you again, but he will remember you as the girl who would not kiss him, and he will not have the opportunity of telling other boys and girls that you would kiss him when he wanted you to.

It is folly to think and suppose things about the relationship between the young man and his other girls. I cannot advise you about your last two questions because I know nothing about the circumstances.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have a brother who is only eighteen years old. He is going with a very pretty girl five years older than himself. She was popular before the boys were called away, but now she has to devote herself to young boys like my brother.

I am very much worried because my brother has fallen desperately in love with this girl and I know she only goes with him to have a good time and have him spend money on her. He doesn't think of anything but the girl and he is very silly and not himself. What can I do to make him realize his mistake and go with girls his own age or younger?

A SISTER.

Let nature work out her own problems, and do not worry about your brother. Most boys of that age have an undesirable love affair, and they all get over it. Probably one of these days the girl will get with some older boy and then your poor brother will have real heartaches, but they will not hurt him permanently. Sympathize with him and be careful not to condemn nor criticize the girl.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: There is a young man who walks home from church with me almost every Sunday. Would it be proper to invite him in to dinner? He has also been to several entertainments taken and shows. DOUBTFUL.

It is not necessary to invite him to dinner, but it would be all right to do so occasionally, under the circumstances.

EVERYDAY ETIQUETTE

When another person is using the telephone, do not exhibit poor manners by interrupting with messages. ETIQUETTE. A suitable gift in remembrance of your friend's birthday would be one of the current books. They are always welcome gifts which may be kept always and give no opportunity for false impressions.

ANXIOUS. You were most unfortunate in making such complimentary remarks as doubtless they were enlarged upon. There is nothing for you to do now except to how and smile cordially when you meet the young man on the street, as it is your duty to speak first. This will give your friend the opportunity to show his breeding, and if he still refuses to speak, he is hardly worth your interest.

Huckleberry Pudding. One-half cup butter, one cup powdered sugar, three-quarters cup milk, two cups flour, three teaspoons baking powder, two eggs, two and one-half cups huckleberries, one-half teaspoon salt, cinnamon, one-third teaspoon ground cream butter and sugar, beat in the egg-yolks, cinnamon and salt. Mix together flour and baking powder, serving two tablespoons of the flour with the huckleberries. Add flour and milk alternately to the first mixture, fold in the egg-whites beaten stiff and then the huckleberries, and bake about 40 minutes in a modern oven. Serve with a lemon or orange sauce.

Bathtub Cleaner—Mix equal parts of chloride of lime and baking soda with just enough hot water to make a paste. Take an old brush and scrub bathtub. Let stand half an hour and then wash off with water and soap and then wash off with cold water and soap. They will be white as snow and all stains gone. Do this once every week, then clean with coal oil the rest of the week. These are cheaper than anything you can use and give best result.

Yellow Tomato Salad (from above menu)—Four large sweet apples, two cups sliced celery, one quart little yellow tomatoes, one large red tomato, mayonnaise, French dressing, lettuce, ripe olives. Peel the yellow tomatoes and let them stand in French dressing for thirty minutes. Chop the apple and celery together quite fine, moisten with mayonnaise, and make pie of this on nests of lettuce leaves. Surround this with the yellow tomatoes and decorate with the red tomato cut in sections and celery. A bit of mayonnaise and an olive should surround it all.

Cooked Salad Dressing—First mixture: Three tablespoons butter (or substitute), one cup milk (sour can be used with one-half teaspoon soda). Make a cream sauce with this and place over hot water below boiling point. The best way to make a cream sauce is to melt the butter and add the flour to make a smooth paste. Then add the milk little by little and stir until nice and creamy.

Second mixture: One teaspoon dry mustard, one teaspoon salt, cayenne pepper, three tablespoons sugar, one egg yolk beaten with one-half cup vinegar. Mix the dry ingredients until equal. Mix the dry ingredients until equal, then add egg yolk, then half the vinegar. Add very very slowly to white sauce over the hot water. If added too quickly it will curdle. Then add the rest of the vinegar slowly and cook until thick. Set away to become cold.

Shrimp Salad—Wash the shrimps in cold water, drain thoroughly and mix with about one-half portion of celery and cut into small pieces, two or three hard-boiled eggs, chopped, and a small quantity of olives or capers, if desired. Mix with mayonnaise dressing and allow to stand overnight. Drain off the dressing and mix with the form of shells and put in each in as much of the mixture as it will hold. Drop a teaspoon of mayonnaise dressing, beaten very stiff, on the top, and serve.

GIRL PRISONER DOES "HOUDINI" OUT OF JAIL. (SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 24.—Houdini had nothing whatever on Marie Johnson who, when locked up in the woman's ward at the police station, climbed over a chair to the transept over the bars that guard the opening. It was believed nothing larger than a cat could squeeze through the opening. Marie, little and slender and twenty, was found the next morning hiding under a bench in the court anteroom, unable to escape to the street. She was charged with robbing Joseph Halstead of $85 while they were out riding.

EIGHT DOLLARS AND EIGHTY-FIVE CENTS.

Which do you think is more valuable, eight dollars and eighty-five cents, or the habit of learning to keep a contract?

A queer little thing happened in our neighborhood recently. Two youngsters of about seven years old had an argument about something one wanted the other to do. James wanted Roderick to help him make a rabbit warren for his new rabbits. Roderick didn't want to. "I'll give you ten cents if you'll help me," said James.

Roderick wouldn't. "Give you fifty cents," "Nope."

"Give you a dollar," Still obstinate.

Had to Get What He Went After. I'll give you all the money in my tin bank," finally offered James, not because he really wanted the rabbit warren that much, but simply because of the excitement and sport of the thing he had to get what he went after. (Just as some day he will go after a college letter, or a good job, or the girl).

Roderick (who I do not really think had been pushing James up, but had merely held out with the same kind of sporting instinct that made James keep on finally said that he'd think over, and ultimately did build the warren.

And the Contract Was Annulled. Now, if there had only been eighty-five cents, or some such childhood's sum of riches, in the bank, all would

WOMEN MAKE PLANS FOR ANNUAL RUMMAGE SALE. Plans are being rapidly matured for the rummage sale which is an annual event for the City Federation of Women and a means by which they secure funds to carry on the rest of the year.

This proposition since its first inception has been maintained by the women with the exception of the aid given it by the city. They have not asked funds from the merchants and do not intend to do so now unless it is absolutely necessary. But they have enlarged their plans for a rummage sale to include the sale of goods of any kind for their sale. A committee of ladies will solicit merchants to look over anything from their stock which they will give them for this purpose. Unsold goods and out of date and shop-worn merchandise will be gratefully accepted by the ladies.

Mrs. J. H. Nichols will canvass the merchants on Milwaukee street and Mrs. S. M. Smith these on Main street. Those who are also asked to street. Those who are also asked to street anything they can to help out on the sale. If they telephone Mrs. J. H. Nichols or Mrs. S. M. Smith, they will call for their stuff and take it to the McNamara store, where the sale will be held on Wednesday and Thursday of next week. This is a much larger plan than they have had before, and the ladies are planning to care for an increased amount of business. They especially ask for furniture, dishes, books, slippers, party dresses, shirt waists, and almost anything in household goods. They guarantee to sell anything.

ALMOST THE END.

"Bah Jove," began Colonel Harta Boetem. "That tale you just told, Bawdewick, about the dangerous skiddedwinks in Asia, reminds me of the narrow escape I had in the Wiltjengen bull jungles in the heart of Africa some ten years ago!"

Sighing heavily, the members present of the Neckles to Nature Club sank back in their chairs and wished they had some cotton wadding. The absent ones didn't count.

"Yes, sah. It was just ten years ago, egad, that I heard of the new specimens of jigglescats in Africa and the Zoo Board commissioned me to capture a few. Well, I equipped myself and went, doncheknow."

"It was unusually hot for Africa, that year, and I got into the hottest part of it too, bah Jove. One day, I saw the tracks of a jigglescat and followed them to the river's edge where they were lost. Feeling unusually hot, I—asked the native guide if there were any alligators in that river. Assuming me that there were none, I—divested myself of my raiment and took a plunge."

"Well, sah, I completely lost my temper. But the Colonel's voice was drowned in a loud guffaw of laughter, so he strode haughtily from the room."

THE STRUGGLE

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

AN ADVENTURE IN FOOD.

Edith sat still after Mrs. Blake had made her indignant exit, whipping her thoughts into practical shape. She was a little dashed at Mrs. Blake's prophecy that nobody could "make a nickel doing fancy cookery unless they did it on a big scale, with things costing so much."

Yet the idea of turning her talent for making "poodies into a means of earning money appealed to her with tremendous force.

She determined to try, at any rate. Accordingly, on the next afternoon, when her work was done, she took a children's plaything, she put on her best-looking clothes and set out, as countless women have done before her, to try to "earn a little money."

She took the trolley to a rather busy corner in a neighboring village, where a fancy grocery flourished. This was patronized by the wealthier families of the district and Edith felt sure they would want some of her kitchen products.

Blushing painfully, she entered the shop and asked for the manager.

"I'm Hardman, madame," bowed a stout man "owner" of the place. "I shall be glad to take your order personally. Have we the pleasure of your account?"

Edith wanted to turn and run, but gathered her courage and replied: "I didn't exactly wish to give an order, I—was hoping you might make one from me. Do you ever, Mr. Hardman, have inquiries for home-made cakes, jellies, mince-meat or simple candies for children?"

The proprietor's face and manner changed abruptly at Edith's halting explanation. He put down his order book, replaced his cap and coughed.

"Ah—well, not much market for 'em," he said, "but your own fancy stuff has it out from the city. We get a good demand for favoring extracts. Know how to make favoring extracts?"

No, Edith didn't know how to do that.

"Well, you might send us a few jars of your preserves, on memoranda—namely, I'll give you what we get for 'em less 20 per cent. But it I was you, lady," he added practically. "I'd try the big stores in the city. They sell to thousands where we have only a local trade. The things have to be made on a big scale or they ain't much good."

No, at all. Good afternoon," Edith felt abashed and flustered by her first experience, in anything along business line. She walked some distance into the residential part of the town, wondering how women ever got started in the remunerative enterprises she read of in magazines and newspapers.

Presently she found herself in front of a handsome estate, parked and beautified to the last degree of lavishness. She slowed down a little in her walk, taking in the beautiful house. Just then a plum-colored limousine swung from the road toward the private driveway of the mansion. A woman looked at Edith through the window of the car, and as Edith turned, the woman bowed, at the same time signaling the chauffeur to stop.

"Oh—beg your pardon," said the limousine lady the next instant. "I mistook you for a friend of mine." But she did not tell the man to drive on. She looked at Edith Ferrol, apparently taking pleasure in her fresh pink face, brightened by the walk and the excitement of the call on the groceryman. "Perhaps you are looking for some one?" she added with the slightest smile of an old lady who has been young for a long time and still rejoices in life and people and the march of events. Her manner impelled Edith to tell her errand.

"Get in here with me," said the lady. "We'll have a cup of tea in the sitting room and talk things over. I know everybody around here."

Feeling somewhere between an adventurer and a book canvasser, but not embarrassed as she had been with the grocer, Edith did talk to her white-haired hostess.

"I like your independence and your spirit, child," said the older woman. "If your marmalade and mince-meat's as good as your breeding, I'll take them gladly. I have a chef and nine other servants—but I'm hungry for something good to eat. Send me a trail batch of all you make."

VITAMINS AND NUTRITION

Vitamins are water-soluble and fat-soluble substances present in various natural foods and indispensable for normal nutrition and normal growth. If an individual's dietary is so restricted to artificial or denatured articles as to be deficient in vitamins, growth is seriously impaired in young and adult health is impaired in adults. Pellagra is one disease, widespread in the Southern states, in all probability caused by a deficiency of vitamins in the food.

E. B. Copenhagen, writing about the vitamins, reminds us that the expectant mother and the nursing mother must have an ample supply of vitamins to prevent such conditions as uncontrollable vomiting, distaste for food, etc. He thinks that if milk has to be pasteurized or sterilized (boiled) during an epidemic of infantile scurvy, the regular allowance of baby should have a regular allowance of some other foods which will supply the essential vitamins, such as fresh meat juice or meat broths, steam cooked fresh vegetables, strained through a sieve, fresh fruit juices.

"Easily digested" foods are generally poor in vitamins. Dried fruits and vegetables contain no vitamins. Fagali observed that sailors in the Japanese prisons gained weight when their rations were modified to include a more liberal allowance of vitamins, though the rations furnished a lower caloric content than before. In some of the white prisons when the bread ration was reduced and barley porridge given instead, the prisoners generally gained weight.

Lack of appetite, according to Madison, is often the first symptom of a vitamin deficiency. Fresh greens, vegetables, fresh fruits, and the green fishes, are famous as appetizers and "blood purifiers" whatever that means. They are rich in vitamins. So is fresh dairy butter, though ordinary butter and vegetable fats lack vitamins.

Vitamin deficiency may be a factor of anemia, neurasthenia and various disturbances of the nervous control of circulation, according to Madison. Any food which has been kept for some time after cooking is likely to be deficient in vitamins. This may be an important consideration in certain large institutions.

Butter, cheese, egg-yolks, raw meat, fresh meat juice, fresh fruit broths or soup, barley, beans and peas (but fresh, not dried), potatoes, all fresh fruits, greens, yeast and cod liver oil are examples of articles rich in vitamins.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

FOOTING AT THE MOUTH

In your health column I read some weeks ago a formula for helping one get rid of pimples. The article said something about dissolving yeast in water. Will you please repeat it? (Mrs. L. C.)

Answer—If you wish to take yeast for acne (pimples) or acne rosacea (rum blossom), take one-half to one ordinary compressed yeast cake, mixed to fluid with half a glass of cold water (or favor with orange juice or beer for three to six weeks. If it proves too laxative, cut down the dose. Obtain a week, at grocers, and keep in the refrigerator or other cool place. In any case this never does harm, and often corrects constipation, increases weight, improves digestion, besides relieving

"COME ON WITH A LETTER FROM HOME," THEY YELL TO POSTMAN

Writing letters home and getting them played an important part in the lives of our boys in France. The first thing the wounded American soldier does when he finds himself resting easy is to write to "the folks" or ask a Red Cross attendant to do the writing for him. And every letter says, "Don't worry. Feeling fine. Want to get back at the Hun." Arrival of the mail truck in camp calls for a wild scramble. The smiles on the faces of the boys in the picture show what the prospects of getting a letter means to a soldier lad.

German 280 mm. gun.

A giant German 280 mm. gun which bombarded the cathedral and surrounding buildings in Amiens has been captured by the Australian troops. The gun fires a shell of about twenty inches in diameter and is mounted on a rail-carriage. The gun was captured August 18. Note its size as compared to the man standing at the left of the picture. But these guns didn't halt the allies.

IMPORTANT CROP IN TROPICS

Demand for Cloves Has Led to Systematic Production—Trees Give Two Crops a Year.

Cloves are now cultivated in many of the tropical regions of the earth. A clove tree begins to bear at the age of ten years, and continues until it reaches the age of seventy-five years. There are two crops a year, one in June and another in December.

The tree is an evergreen and grows from 40 to 50 feet high, with large, oblong leaves and crimson flowers at the ends of small branches in clusters of from 10 to 20. The tree belongs to the same botanical order as the guava. The cloves, which are the undeveloped buds, are at first white, then light green, and at the time of gathering bright red.

Pieces of white cloth are spread under the trees at harvesting time, and the branches are beaten gently with bamboo sticks until the cloves drop. They are dried in the sun, being tossed about daily until they attain the rich, dark color that proclaims them ready for shipment.

In this country, as well as in England, cloves are used almost wholly as condiment, but in France they are employed largely in the manufacture of certain liquors; and to some extent they are used in medicine on account of their tonic properties.

Poison in Self-Defense

While we very naturally dislike a plant that poisons us when we touch it, yet if we investigate the reason for its poison we discover that a vast number of plants develop poisons and near poisons, and when we look over the list we find that we would be rather badly off without them. The National Geographic Magazine states. It is true that most of them are poisonous only when eaten, and that few are poisonous to the touch; but they have all developed these qualities in self-defense.

Some of them store their poison in their seeds, others in their root stocks and others in their roots to protect their progeny from harm. They do not go about looking for trouble or seeking, like the devil, whom they may destroy; but they are prepared to resist invasion of the rights of their children. Nux vomica and aconite are two of this kind.

Others develop alkaloids, like the nicotine of tobacco, the quinine of the cinchona tree and the theine of tea, to protect themselves. Strychnine, digitalis and a hundred and one indispensable drugs that are poisonous in overdoses are the gifts of the plant world to man as a byproduct of plant preparations for self-defense.

SOLDIERS PUT UP
STIFF TENNIS GAME

New York, Sept. 24.—Evidently service with the navy and army abroad has not dulled the playing edge of some of the American tennis stars judging from recent English comment. The recent work of certain players at the Queen's Club, London, "The speed and skill of at least one young American has been compared favorably with that of the great Maestros McLaughlin and this coming from an English writer critic leaves nothing to be desired in this direction."

The complimentary comment arose as the result of the playing of a tournament last month at the Queen's Club for the benefit of blinded soldiers which attracted hundreds of Americans, a number of star players from many of the allied countries.

One of the contests was between teams picked from the British and American navies on one side and from the British and American armies on the other. Admiral Sims of the American navy and General Bidell of the American army were present. The contest, which smacked of Wimbledon in pre-war days was won by the army combination, 13 sets to 12.

Sport Snap Shots

MORRIS MILLER

Professional boxing continues to flourish in England despite the war. Twenty-two championship contests have been held since the war broke out. These fights have embraced every class except the lightweights. The fact that Freddy Welsh, holder of the Lord Londsdale belt, emblematic of the lightweight championship, is in the colored states has caused the lack of interest in that class.

Bombardier Wells still holds the heavyweight championship of Great Britain. Sergeant Major Dick Smith has won the light-heavyweight title. Sergeant Pat O'Keefe has fought his way to the middleweight title.

Taney Lee is the featherweight champion. Young Fox is bantam champion and Jimmy Wilde, a private in the British army, is the flyweight champion.

If anyone should announce Sailor Simon W. Thompson at the inside shows few fans would pay any attention to the announcer—until they saw Thompson. For Sailor Thompson is Peter Jackson, one of the greatest colored boxers in ring history. He is stationed at the Mare Island navy yard and hopes to go across soon.

Jackson failed to win a championship in his long career, but was a better fighter and always gave his best. He knocked out Joe Walcott in four rounds when Joe held the welterweight championship of the world, but sporting critics at the time did not give him the welterweight crown.

Jackson fought as a business. He believed he could make more money in that line than in any other game. He is forty years old now but appears to be in good condition.

Joe Shugrue, former lightweight boxer, who makes his home in Waterbury, Conn., recently was selected by the army surgeons at Camp Devens, Ayer, Mass., because of defective eyesight.

Five or six years ago Shugrue was one of the leading boxers at his weight in the country and enjoys the distinction of being the only boy ever to knock out Benny Leonard. Shugrue and Leonard met when both were new at the game and Joe knocked Benny cold in four rounds, who then claimed Jersey City as his home, boxed often when at the height of his career, and it was said that his sight was affected by repeated blows which he sustained over the eyes. For a time he was threatened with permanent blindness.

During the season which has just closed Matty's Reds had a most successful home stand, but once they left the town to their opponents' lot they found the going rather tough. While on their own the Reds' warriors won more than two-thirds of their contests, but away from home they were only able to win a little more than one-third of the amount of games played. Of the seventy games played in Cincinnati the Reds won forty-six and lost twenty-four. On their opponents' grounds they won twenty-one and dropped thirty-six. They won the season's series from the Giants, Robins, Cards and Phillies and lost to the Braves, Cubs and Pirates.

No matter what effect war may have on sports this winter there won't be any ban on snowballing, coasting, cutting stars, etc.

There are a lot of ticket scalpers who have thrown away their pockets full of unsold tickets and have sworn off on world series business in the future.

When there was one nose tang about the world series this year. There was plenty of room for everybody.

Bob Bescher, picked up by Cleveland after the season was under way, finished the 1918 season in fifth place in the league batting list.

And Woman.

"To be happy a man needs a wonderful digestion and a woman needs beautiful attire." "Yes," commented Miss Cayenne, "one wants the stomach of an ostrich and the other wants the feathers."

Tales of the Friendly
Forest

DAVID CORY

Over the hills and far away
I hear the army bugles play.
I hear the drums beat loud and fast
And the army wagons rattle past.
And I go to the nursery and look at the toy

That belonged to my little soldier boy.

This is the poem that Mrs. Bunny put in a letter to her little rabbit son and when he showed it to Uncle Lucky that old gentle man rabbit sat down on a camp stool just outside his tent and took Billy Bunny's drum for a table, and then he wrote this little poem for drummer boy Billy Bunny to send back to his mother:

On the field or in my tent,
Underneath the blue,
I am ever thinking,
Mother dear of you.

To the old Red, White and Blue.

And then Billy Bunny called to Blackie Crow and told him to take the letter as fast as he could fly to the Old Brier Patch, Snake Fence
Corner, and give it to his mother.

Well, sir, it didn't take that little crow messenger long to give her the letter, and wasn't she glad to get it?

Well, I just guess she was. And she made Blackie Crow wait until she did up a little bundle for her drummer boy bunny. And what do you think was in it. Well, I'll just tell you.

First, there was a nice warm knitted mitten, and then a knitted helmet, and two pairs of warm socks, and a lovely sweater, and a bottle of Jamaica Ginger, so if he had a stomach ache he wouldn't have to stay awake all night. And, let me see. I know there was something more. Oh, yes, a little cake of soap in case he got his face dirty.

HE'S ONLY 4 FEET 10
INCHES, BUT PATRIOTIC

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS]

Topeka, Kan., Sept. 24.—(P. O. Mon.) denhall, of Esbon, Kan., four feet-ten inches tall, is certain he can kill as many boches as any other Kansan but, despite this, he is unable to get into military service. The army, navy, marines and even the draft board has turned him down time after time. He says in a letter to Adjutant General Huffman, and he puts the matter up to the General as to what to do.

He is single, has no dependents, is not needed at home, and is willing and anxious to get to France, but Uncle Sam says "No."

The General told him he did not know what the young man could do to get into the army unless he can stretch himself two inches.

The Intentions of Olga

By IMES McDONALD

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

By birth Olga Mitshakoff was half American, but in looks and temperament, all Russian. When she was six years old her American mother had brought her back to Indiana, never again to return to the old, tumble-down estate of her Russian father. At the time she had no understanding of the reason for this, and though she never missed to any extent her gruff, rough-bearded father, she did dream of the old half-ruined castle in which she was born, and the sturdy, kindly peasants who were so like children all grown up.

By the time she was sixteen, the fine thread of her dreams had woven itself into the fabric of desire—the desire to be an artist, and her American mother, being an intelligent as well as a practical person, saw to it that Olga should get the best art training obtainable in the locality in which they lived. But when she was twenty Olga had outgrown the possibilities of that locality, and with a little sigh her mother sent her to New York.

Her mother was much surprised at the more than a year later when Olga wrote that she was working in a commercial studio at thirty-five dollars a week, for she herself had been teaching school for fifteen years and had only reached twelve hundred a year. However, two years later Mrs. Mitshakoff married again—an old sweetheart of her youth, and Olga breathed with a new feeling of freedom.

In spite of the fact that in Moon, Indiana, Olga would have been looked upon as a terrible young person, she was a demure, conventional, little thing deep down inside. Her mother was immeasurably horrified on her last visit to Olga in New York to find that young woman with fluffy short hair after the style of New York's bohemia.

But the conventional Olga went blithely on her unconventional way. She was making sixty dollars a week now, and she and Clara Sommers, the newspaper woman with whom she lived, put their savings together and found, to their joy, that they had enough for a modest little home in the country. So the summer Olga was twenty-seven they chose a pretty little place within commuting distance of New York. That same summer Olga's salary was raised to seventy-five dollars a week, and she decided to get a small car. The car necessitated a garage, and the garage needed a builder, so the village carpenter was called into consultation and given the job.

At two o'clock the following Saturday afternoon, Olga arrived from the city hot and eager for the cool bath that awaited her. She slipped into fresh clothes and pulled a bright-colored smock over her pretty bobbed head, then skipped out into the garden to watch the progress of the garage building which was half completed.

Stephen Niles, the village carpenter, saw her coming. He was nailing the sheathing on the roof, and he stared in surprise as she scrambled up the ladder and slid along the slanting roof toward him.

"You're getting along beautifully, aren't you?" she smiled.

"Oh, fair," conceded Stephen Niles. He had given women but little thought until he saw Olga Mitshakoff, but he thought her the strangest creature of them all, and at the same time the most wonderful.

When they descended from the roof that afternoon she sat on a sawhorse in the shade and nonchalantly watched him measuring and sawing some boards.

"You don't quite approve of me, do you, Stephen?"

He laid down his saw deliberately. "Most people don't approve of what they don't understand," he said, looking at her thoughtfully.

"You blessed man!" she laughed. "Did you know that you were a philosopher?"

"I know this much," he said slowly. "I can't do any work when you are around. I haven't done a dollar's worth since you came this afternoon."

"Oh," she threw up her hands in mock despair, "he's temperamental, too."

And it all happened just as he feared it would. The next afternoon he came over just to look over the work—he never worked on Sunday at his trade, but the girls were working.

They pressed him to stay to supper, and reluctantly he stayed. And afterwards Olga sat with him in the shadows and chattered on and on.

"Now that you approve of me more," she said, "you can see how easy I am to understand, can't you, Steve?"

"I don't suppose," he said, slowly, "you'd hurt anyone on purpose," his strong hands gripped tight her arms and he looked down into her upturned face trying to read her heart through the darkness. "I don't suppose you would, but after you'd made me love you what did you figure to do about it?"

"Oh, carpenter-man," murmured Olga, leaning toward him eagerly, "after I'd made you love me, I figured on marrying you, Steve."

Of course her friends said she was a fool—her talent and culture wasted—that they could never have anything in common, but the other night I saw them at a restaurant and a certain question keeps recurring to me. "What is this wonderful thing that has happened to Olga Mitshakoff?"

Some Turn.

HEMMING DESCRIBES AVIATION TRAINING

Cadet Flyer Victor E. Hemming, Home on Furlough, Gives Interesting Talk to High School Students.

A vivid description of the many types of airplanes used on the battlefields of Europe today and the present day methods of training flyers in the U. S. at the flying fields of Texas was given by Cadet Flyer Victor E. Hemming at the high school this morning before the students and faculty. The speaker chose the topic because of its vital importance at the present time as being one of the means of the allies of winning the war and because the students are interested in that phase of army life.

The speaker told of the several types of machines used for reconnaissance work, fighting, scouting, and of the weight carriers. Of special interest was the description of the S. P. A. D. machine used by the French and British for scout work on the front lines. The machine has a speed of one hundred and forty miles per hour and can climb ten thousand feet in seven minutes. It is equipped with one of the best motors in the world, the name of which was not divulged by the speaker. Descriptions of the Hadley-Page, Curtis training planes, French Caudrons and Caproni weight carriers were given. The weight carrying machines are able to carry for a long distance flight about five tons of bombs, which can be used to drop on enemy territory.

The training methods of flyers were especially dealt with and especially the many humorous things that happen during the initial flights of cadets. The speaker told of an instance where a lieutenant flyer in attempting to land at one of the fields caught one of his wing tips on the chimney of a house, knocking the chimney from its position and rolling the flyer off the roof of the house onto the ground. Although the aviator was unconscious for a time he soon recovered from his accident and was able to return to his field in a day or two. The machine, however, was completely demolished and the broken members were carried back on trucks to the flying field.

"It is a common sight to see twenty or thirty planes in the air at one time," the speaker said. "All kinds of stunts are done by flyers after they have mastered the fundamentals of driving the airplanes, including loops, nose dives, Immelman turns, etc. To a speaker has been in attendance at the United States Army School of Military Aeronautics at Austin, Tex., and has undergone rigid training. The school is termed the 'West Point' of the air service and is the best school in the world. Its strict discipline, rigid academic courses and studious atmosphere are not equalled by any of the other schools. It is under command of Lieutenant Colonel Yount, a man of West Point and a strict disciplinarian, who firmly believes that the aviators who are now being trained will be the men who will aid greatly in winning the war."

The speaker stated that he believed the war would be won through the air by dropping bombs on the cities of Germany causing internal revolutions rather than reaching a decision on the battlefields. Airplanes and personnel are being furnished at a rapid rate and are being shipped as fast as possible with the result that American aviators will soon take the upper hand in all movements in the air in the near future on all fronts in the big war.

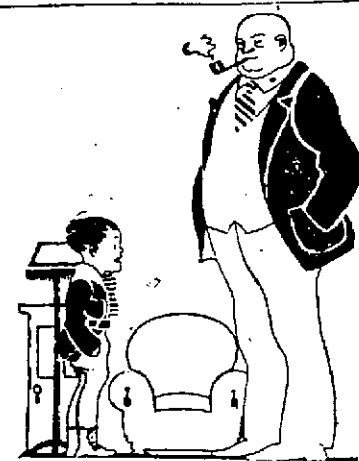

In his few closing remarks the speaker told of the rules governing the ground school and of the fact that about eighty men started the course which he and only a few over forty finished the course successfully. The school is run on the merit system, fifteen demerits meaning the immediate dismissal of the cadet. Everything is taken into consideration, including the neatness of personal appearance, clothing, bunk, lockers and such things. In fact the school as a whole is run on West Point principles. The speaker is home on a thirteen day furlough and will return to his command at Austin, Texas on October 4th, from where he will go to Camp Dick, Dallas, Texas, the aviation concentration camp, and from there to one of the flying fields of the country for his final training, before being commissioned and going across the water.

The speaker was introduced by H. H. Faust, superintendent of schools.

WRITES OF TRIP ON TRANSPORT ACROSS

REVEREND C. E. EWING WRITES OF MEETING JANESVILLE BOYS ON BOAT.

TELLS OF "Y" WORK

How Americans Are Greeted When They Land in England and the Great Work That Is Being Done.

In a most interesting letter Rev. C. E. Ewing, former pastor of the Congregational church here, who resigned his charge to enter Y. M. C. A. work, tells of his journey across the Atlantic on one of the big transports, his meeting with allied troops and experiences on board. His letter is as follows:

Wednesday, Sept. 4.
My Dear Mr. Atwood:
While I am writing this to you in the form of a personal letter, I shall be glad to have you use it in the Gazette any parts that you may wish in your paper. I ask you to publish the references to individual people who are known in Janesville and vicinity. Their friends will be glad to hear from them in this indirect way.

My own experience has been similar to that of many of the Y. M. C. A. secretaries for overseas work. I spent more than seven weeks in New York city, waiting for my passport, but using the time in studying and learning French, in military drill, in helping to organize the men who were in the city and in preparing generally for the work in France. Arrangements have now been made so that most secretaries who receive appointments will be expected to remain in New York until their papers are ready. I hope there may be several men from our own city. The requirements are sterling character, soundness of mind, and a capable body. Small or large, and a capable body. Small or large, and a capable body.

Every troop ship that crosses the Atlantic is expected to have assigned to it two Y. M. C. A. secretaries for the trip over. The regular transports have one secretary who remains on board back and forth. With L. H. Fountain, of Milwaukee, I was assigned to a ship sailing from a port where no American troops had been embarked before. We had a good steady ship, and as the weather and the sea were favorable, we made the smoothest voyage that the ship's officers had ever experienced. We were guarded with vigilance, and our passage was absolutely safe. Between shore and shore, no one was even sick.

Among the soldiers on board were four from Janesville and one from Evansville. These were men who left home in April to enter the Coast Artillery Corps at Fort Stevens, Oregon. Please let their friends know that they all took the trip in fine condition. I had a good visit with them all, the night before we landed, and they looked and felt first class. These are the men: Leslie C. Stewart, John Metzinger, William Nolan, and Edward J. Delaney of Janesville, and a young man by the name of Phillips, 340 W. Sixth St., Evansville.

When we reached the coast of England, we landed at a port where the people were hearty in their welcome. American flags flying on many buildings, and the American Y secretaries were at the dock to welcome the boys as they stepped ashore.

We hear a great deal about the enthusiastic reception which French people give our boys when they land in France, but it is doubtful if the reception the Yanks receive in England is any less warm. At one of the chief ports where the U. S. transports and troop ships are to call, the eye of the first thing that greets the eye of the American Y. M. C. A. on land. This is above the caution which the American "Y" has been running for several months on the docks. As the soldiers stand on the docks, it is a very cheery sight for their eyes and they invariably are heard to say, "Well, the good old 'Y' is on the job over here as well as at home." The men usually have a short time on the dock before they are marched to their nearby post camp or to the troop train which is to carry them to a rest camp further away.

During the short interval on the dock, the Y. M. C. A. secretaries and English volunteer women workers hand out thousands of hot drinks and a bite to eat. While the soldiers are enjoying their first refreshment on foreign soil, the Y. M. C. A. secretaries go among the men taking cables which they may want to send home telling of their safe arrival, exchanging money and telling the men about some of the interesting sights to be seen for the first time in the city. The Y. M. C. A. secretaries also distribute letters of welcome from the Y.

The English people are giving our boys a rousing reception and one which they will never forget.

The boys marched on to a "rest camp" about five miles from the dock and were assigned places in tents. I went out in the evening and found them just finishing their first meal ashore. The weather was damp, chilly and windy, and I imagine they would have both blankets and overcoats at night, but they all appeared cheerful and glad to be ashore. We had gone aboard on Aug. 18 and did not disembark until the last day of the month. I came to London the next day. Here too, the American Y. M. C. A. is at work. In the heart of the city, they have "Eagle Hut" for the men and the "Washington Inn" for officers. The Y. M. C. A. made a surprise visit one day, and I am sending you the photo that was taken.

My own time here is very short. I leave for Paris this afternoon. I have been seeing London on foot. Let me send you a card photo of St. Paul's Cathedral. It is quite remarkable because it shows the U. S. flag flying from the next building. Put it in your window and let the folks see it. Rev. G. E. Ewing is here. I had dinner with him on Monday evening and a delightful visit. He is connected with the Finance Committee of the Y. M. C. A. War Work Council, and has been deputed to make investigations in Great Britain, France and Italy in preparation for the next drive for funds. He was in Chateau Thierry when the Americans were fighting just north of there. He saw the men come back tired and dirty and hungry and wounded. He went through the hospital back at the base, where men had been brought many miles from the emergency hospital. And he has never heard a word of complaint from one of them. He says that if anyone suggests that the American fighting men are the best the American soldiers, he is a lost liar.

Within a few days I may be nearer to the fighting line myself. Keep up the good work at the home.

Yours truly,
Charles E. Ewing.

SCHOOL

They shall teach him to read,
How to write and how to spell.
He shall follow where they lead,
With the ringing of the bell.
Once in school, his little mind
Shall belong to those who teach.
But I mustn't stay behind,
Out of sight and out of reach.
I must meet him at the door
When his simple tasks are through.
Chattering with him as before,
I must teach him to be true.

He shall learn in school of kings,
And of lands across the sea.
They shall teach him many things
That he couldn't learn from me.
They can better teach than I
Much his little mind should know.
But we didn't say good-bye
When to school I let him go.

Howsoever kind and wise,
All his teachers there shall be,
He will never higher rise
Than the things he learns from me.

It is not enough to know

How to write and how to spell.
Some one also has to show
How to use those talents well.
There are lessons all must learn
Supplementing those of school.
Then it is a father's turn
To explain each puzzling rule,
I must wait for him at night,
Following his school days through,
I must guide his feet aright,
I must teach him to be true.

CATHOLIC FORESTERS CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY

A very pleasant surprise was tendered Mr. and Mrs. William O'Connor at their home on Milton avenue Friday, when the Catholic Order of Foresters of Milton Junction, of which Mr. O'Connor is an active member, reminded them of their thirtieth wedding anniversary. The evening was pleasantly spent in card playing and music. A two-course supper was served, after which Mr. and Mrs. O'Connor were presented with a handsome set of Haviland china dishes. At a late hour the guests departed, wishing Mr. and Mrs. O'Connor many more years of married life.

His Systematic Moving

By FANNY MAJORS

"Tom is going to move into another place," said the bride. "I've been simply dying to houseclean his bookcases, and things and I told him I was coming down to help him."

"Oh, my heavens!" interrupted the woman who has been married for some time. "Keep away! Don't go within a mile of the moving process! How lucky you are that I am here to save you."

"Wh-wh—" stammered the surprised bride.

"Never shall I forget the time," proceeded the long-married lady, "when John thought that the eastern branch needed him permanently, and he decided to store his office furniture here in the basement of a flat building he owned. Like most business men, John loves detail, and I was suspicious of his ability to move three large bookcases and arrive with half the things. I offered to help him get books and pictures and his heaps of papers in order for the journey."

"But it developed differently. One night he arrived for dinner looking wild and distracted. He was so jumpy he couldn't sit still. If he had been a woman he would have had hysterics and kicked his heels."

"I'm moving," he said, defiantly. "I've been moving all day! No, of course my papers and things weren't ready," he admitted to my questioning. "Why, I just sort of clucked them into drawers! Yes, of course, they had to take all the drawers out to move the tables and filing cabinets! No, of course I didn't see that they were covered tightly! Whichever I'd cover 'em with? No, I couldn't get one of the big movers. I grabbed an expressman a man told me about. No, he hasn't a van! Oh, a sort of wagon with two dying horses and I think the three men he sent have creeping paralysis! They started to take things down at 2 o'clock and hadn't got them put on the wagon when I left! And it's raining—and the wagon hasn't a cover! Oh, gee, it's a mess!"

"I led John sternly to hot coffee and a steak and then I insisted on going with him to the building where the things were to be stored. I carried dustcloths and old newspapers in a wild hope of repairing some of the damage. We arrived to find a small motor delivery wagon disgorging some of his furniture on to the sloppy walk. It seemed that he had too much for the original wagon. The wagon was on the way. No, there was no telling when it would arrive. And, say, where was the basement light?"

"There were no lights in that part of the basement. One of the movers produced some candle stubs. Filling all over themselves in the grim gloom, they got the dripping chairs and tables inside and I mopped them off."

"Then we settled down to wait. The basement was an immense cavern of cement and the three candle stubs turned it into a regular conspirator's den. I never saw such complete and whole-hearted waiting as we did. John wandered restlessly back and forth, busting into verbal spasms whenever he remembered that his typewriter was in the missing wagon, uncovered, or that he couldn't recall where he had checked the expressman's name. The case, upside on the floor, sat a better, more honest figure. It was the owner of the express wagon. Inside it three husky movers smoked good cigars and rested violently."

"Are you paying for this by the job or by the hour?" I asked John.

"By the hour," he said, meekly.

"I took a deep breath. Are you—er—paying for these hours while we are waiting to know whether those horses finally have died or whether the men merely have stopped for refreshments and are discussing the political situation?"

"I am," admitted John. "Three-seventy-five per!"

"Two hours later the wagon creaked up through the rain and three more movers began adding to the confusion. I never saw such a swirl of desks, books, pictures and papers. I rescued wads of important papers in every direction where the jolly movers buried them. The tangle of glass as they stepped through water-color drawings, the mean of solid mahogany as something scraped across its surface, the sputter of books as they crashed on the floor, the hoarse growls of the portly head expressman, the rumbling ground in that dim cavern as six deep-breathed men all tried to lift one chair simultaneously was tragic."

"John paid a bill three times what it should have been and I saw my new fur coat vanish into the pocket of the fat expressman. We crept home exhausted at 11 o'clock that night and it took us a week to get all that stuff properly packed, arranged and stored, and by that time John and I weren't speaking and both of us meditated consulting divorce lawyers. No, don't try to help Tom!"

"Well, maybe it would be too much for my nerves," admitted the bride. "I had no idea they were so impetuous!"

The Only Thing Lacking.

PHILADELPHIA AGAIN CRADLE OF LIBERTY

Philadelphia, Sept. 25.—Shipbuilding, under the spur of the German submarine menace, has made Philadelphia for the second time in American history, a "Cradle of Liberty."

Coastored by the natural advantages of the Delaware River, together with proximity to the nation's steel production centers, the country's largest group of shipyards, including the world record making Hog Island plant, has grown up in the home district of the Pennsylvania metropolis.

In this district are employed more than 100,000 shipworkers, one-fourth the enrollment in the industry throughout the United States, whose output to date is fifty vessels, twenty-seven of them ready for service. Vessels of all types, from 5,000-ton wooden steamers to huge steel freighters 12,000 tons, are produced. The influx of workers has overgrown a score of communities, enforcing the building of seven new towns, yet the cry is for more men and more men. Given a sufficiency of materials and the workers to handle them, the "Philadelphia phenomenon" in ship construction promises to become another world's wonder.

In this region the Emergency Fleet Corporation, through the companies carrying on its work, has undertaken an extensive housing project. At Bristol, Chester, Cornwells, and Hog Island in Pennsylvania, at Camden and Gloucester on the New Jersey side and at Wilmington in Delaware, homes, bachelor apartments, barracks, boarding houses and even a hotel have been erected, with the hope of solving the problem of inadequate labor growing out of poor accommodations.

How the yards on the Delaware have expanded in the past eleven months and what this influx of labor means to the communities along the river is indicated by comparison with the census of last October, when the aggregates of men engaged was less than 25,000, including Crumps and the New York Shipbuilding Corporation, which were then working as completed yards, the nine other plants on the Delaware then reported 12,000 workers.

First Novel of America in the Great War

Victor Rousseau,
 author of many popular stories, has written a gripping romance that deals with the forces which are now fighting on the "frontier of freedom."

Bride
of Battle

Is an up-to-the-minute story that will bring a thrill to every American who reads
 it. There are mystery,
 romance and real fighting in it. The vivid word-picture of the battle which raged all day in the streets of the little French village will set your blood tingling.

This story will appear soon as a serial in this paper.
